

Kotomi Mori is currently an undergraduate student in the Department of Electrical Engineering at Meiji University, Japan. Her research interests include electromagnetic compatibility (EMC) and conducted electromagnetic interference (EMI) in inverter-fed motor drive systems, with a particular focus on high-frequency noise characteristics and their analysis in electric drive systems.